PREFACE.

The great bulk of the WEEKLY REGISTER, and the importance of the documents and facts recorded in its ponderous volumes—with the daily increasing difficulty of being able to collect the point of time at which any thing occurred so as to refer to a particular volume to find it—and the trouble even then, of obtaining a collected view of all the facts, papers and circumstances belonging to many things inserted—called loudly for a GENERAL INDEX, by which all these disadvantages might be obviated, and every article desired to be found could be certainly and instantly referred to;—all matters belonging to any article being gathered under one head—in which also each article should be clearly designated by its date or some other means.

Though deeply impressed with the utility of such an INDEX, the idea of the labor that would be required to compile it was truly formidable, and a series of difficulties was felt in the execution, of no interest to the public though severely felt by the editor. Suffice it to say, that after the expenditure of much time and money in two unsuccessful attempts to accomplish the work, the present plan was adopted after much reflection, and a gentleman well fitted to the task was found who, with Job-like patience and unwearied industry, completed the index for the first ten volumes. That for the 11th and 12th volumes was added by the editor himself—who partially revised and re-examined the whole, and new-modelled many of the most important articles.

The chief object was to combine accuracy with brevity—and simplicity with clearness.—If this object is not obtained, its failure must not be attributed to parsimony of labor or expense; for neither of these have been spared. The price may seem high when the size of the volume is compared with that of the REGISTER itself—but the principal part of the profit expected to be derived from the INDEX is in the increased value that it gives to the work generally.

After all our carefulness, there must be errors in the references. Perhaps, it may be counted as an impossibility, that no errors should have escaped us. But as almost every article is noticed under more than one head—sometimes under as many as four or five, it is reasonable to hope that any difficulty arising from such errors may be easily got over.

BRIEF EXPLANATION OF THE PLAN OF THE INDEX.

The index is composed of two divisions, under the names of GENERAL and CONGRESSIONAL DEPARTMENTS: to which is added a brief analysis of all the articles inserted under the head of "CHRONICLE."

The GENERAL DEPARTMENT is an entire analysis of all things contained in the twelve volumes of the WEEKLY REGISTER, except of articles inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL DEPARTMENT, or referred to by the letters C. D. In the former, the heads, battles, letters, statistics and the names of states and countries, &c. &c. are highly important and useful—and in the latter, those of bills, resolutions, military and naval affairs, &c. &c. will be found exceedingly to facilitate references. Words inserted in parenthesis always refer to the volume and page immediately following.

As a common rule, this practice should be observed—refer first to the GENERAL DEPARTMENT for any desired article under its own proper head; if it does not belong to congressional affairs, it will probably be found there—but if not found there, then refer to what may be considered as a general head for such subjects: thus, if it belongs to Agriculture, turn to "Agriculture"—to any thing that happened in or pertained to the British kingdoms, see "British affairs"—if in Connecticut, see "Connecticut," &c. Every important thing is so often noticed and under so many heads, that it seems hardly possible that any one cannot be directly found, after a very slight examination of the principles of the INDEX. In some cases, in long articles, a chronological order is partly observed; in others, as in "British affairs" for instance, there is an alphabet within the general alphabet; and nothing has been left undone that we could contrive, to facilitate the great purposes intended: and we trust that we have succeeded as well as could have been reasonably hoped for.

☞ It was thought most useful to bring under this head all the statistical and tabular articles, scattered through the work, and considerable attention has been paid to render the references thereto as easy as possible. But the things here noticed are only repetitions of what is stated under the heads to which they immediately belong; which will be generally referred to; and if not found there, resort will be had to this collection.

The articles belonging to Britain, France, &c. and to the individual states, are under their several titles; those of Great Britain, being numerous, are alphabetically arranged within themselves—all the articles not otherwise specially designated, belong to the United States. See "Treasury reports," &c. &c. General statistical table of empires, kingdoms and states of the world, with notes and illustrations, III 121.
